			Midnight between the 17 th and 18 th Day Instant, and so Suddenly prevailed, after the Discovery of it, that although we escap'd with our Lives (to God be all hearty Praise and Thanks) yet we have lost the Chief of our Goods, Cloths, Stores etc.: and were able to Save but little: By which means we are reduced to a miserable and destitute State and Condition. I do gratefully acknowledge the Kindness of the People of God among whom we live; but yet find it needfull, and think it my Duty to address several Neighbouring Towns for Relief and therefore as I have the Place of my Birth, So I humbly beg Leave to lay our distressed Circumstances before you, among whom I lived thro a great part of my Youth full Life; for whom therefore I would retain proper Respect, and especially the Church into which I was admitted."

Let us then Consider It is a Day of great Trouble and Distress with many with whom we as fellow-Christians ought tenderly to Sympathize; for we are Members one of another. But this is not all; We are all, in every town and place, more or less affected herewith and shall be unavoidably, one way or another Sufferers hereby" (pp. 3-4).

With respect to the Spanish: “in terrible Things, in Righteousness did the Lord answer us, upon them. For, in the Short Time the War lasted against them besides what was done to their Shipping, they lost Havannah and tho that is restored yet have we all Florida which may prove very beneficial to the british Interest. We are prone also to judge that these terrible Things are in Righteousness because of their breach of Treaty, joining with Our Enemies, and annoying and invading our Allies.” With respect to the Indians: “we don’t know what terrible Things God has done distinctly among them but this is apparent that by their loosing such a support as the French were to them they would no Question, account it very terrible.” Parkman cautions: “Yet we may not Pride our Selves nor boast.” He points to the loss of men and the increased national debt. More importantly, “we could not quietly enjoy the Blessings of Peace. Three Things have especially occurred. One, the Sad intestine Commotion at Home arising from the different sentiments about the making Peace. Another Thing is the prohibiting by Act of Parliament the Colonies supplying themselves with the Produce of the West Indies, from any other than our own Island, which has extremely embarrassed the Trade of all Northern Colonies, and
